JOHN W. GOFF.

(Who may succeed if Fellows falls.) There is a far more important phase of the question for the Grand Jury to probe than has yet been developed. No one in the possession of his mental faculties believes that the accused ward men who collected the unholy tribute were the sole beneficials by it. They were merely agents who probably received a small percentage for their trouble and to secure their silence, while the bulk of the ill-system gains, it may be found was divided among men above them in rank.

How Was the Young Divided?

Just how far this corruption extended among the superior officers of the force is for the Grand Jery to find out.

For whom did the ward men collect procection money, and among whom and among how many was it divided?

Lie Grand Jury might also in this connection inquire into the causes of the many "shake ups" among the captains.

The question is of the litmost importance in view of the testimany of Witners Prien, the former keeper of a disorderly house in Hayard street, who swore that he paid $500 finitiation fee" every time a pew Captain was placed in command of the precipet.

He mentioned in his testimony Captain, how inspector alchauchin, Captains 'Tross, Cassidy and Deers'.

The public are informed every time a shift of captains is made that the Haparintenden. Ferommended the change for reasons of to be disclosed, but usually said to be done for the picervation of discipline, or more commonly "for the good of the service."

Are these wholemale transfers made "for the good of the vorvice" or for the benefit of a clique of blackmaliers, who secure thereby favorable opportunities to impose a tax of $50 upon the keepers of disreputable resorts in the precinct, every time they change location? No District-Autorney of New York has ever had the opportunity Col. Fellows has to make out such a clear case against officials who grow rich on the proceeds of evil in the most irrominious way known to law. Col. GRANGER'S WHEREABOUTS.

yer and Landlord Discard Him. MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., June 2 .-Attorney S. J. Stillwell returned from White Plains shortly after 2 o'clock today and was seen by an "Evening

World" reporter. "The story that Granger visited me resterday," he said, "is untrue. Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms Burr, of the Lexow Committee, was out here, and we went driving together. He looks omething like Granger, and that is the way the story got out. I suppose. I have nothing to do with Granger, now, and will not have any more dealings with him, as I regard him as utterly unworthy of confidence. I have heard nothing of him since Tuesday night. He sent me a note, written upon a page torn from a memorandum book, as follows:

iowa:

Friend Stillwell: From Instructions and information I have received through my friend Broadlead from both my father and my counsel in the city. I am perfectly sure that the step you and myself were contemplating taking would be most unwise at present, so do nothing now, or any way until you hear from me. Yours truly.

"I'm done with Granger." said the lawyer. "I don't know where he is and I don't care. I think if they looked for him up around East Portchester, just over the Connecticut line, they would come pretty near finding him. I am pretty certain, however, that he does not intend to testify again before the Lexow Committee. You may put that down as a fact."

"Has he been bought off?"

"I'don't know. I have nothing further to say about the matter."

Lawyer Stillwell added that he would appear before the Committee ext Monday and woud be ready to answer any questions that might be asked him. provided the Committee wanted to call him as a witness.

Joseph Weber, the proprietor of the Weber House, where Granger applied for accommodations when he left New York last week, said he had not seen Granger since last Thursday night.

"He came to me last week and said he wanted accommodations for a week, where he would not be disturbed, and I sent him to my brother's place first, and search the corresponding week of last year the exports were $7,298,402.

A COMMITTEE NAMED.

N. Y. and N. E. Bondholders Meet and Take Action.

At the meeting of the first mortgage bond-holders of the New York and New England Railroad held at the office of Redmond, Kerr & Co. this morning, Mr. W. B. Clark, of Hartford, Conn. presided. Lawyer Lauterbach said immediate action was necessary if bond-holders desired to protect their interests before a second default in the bonds occurred.

Resolutions were adopted to the effect Resolutions and could be fairly assumed to committee was some good reason in the committee why the grand to the equility the alterputs to bribe Senators, he thought it might with propriety have the secret. There was no reason why the other branches should not be conducted in public. As a general proposition, investigations chould be open. Injustice could follow to not be conducted in public. As a general proposition, investigations chould be open. Injustice could follow to held in secret. There was no reason why the other branches should not be conducted in p

But, as a matter of fact, the sessions of the Committee were neither public nor private. The testimony was taken in secret and a day or two afterwards given to the press. This course, Mr Hill pointed out, did an injustice to with tesses and necessarily produced the been admitted absolutely authentic and correct accounts would have gone forth to the country in the first instance.

Mr. Hunton asked Mr. Hill whether he had ever known a case where the Senate had attempted to control the manner in which one of its committees conducted the work it was asked to perform.

Mr. Hill replied that he had no knowledge as to precedents, but he insisted that the Senate did not and could not alrogate its control over a committee when that committee was appointed. The precedents, Mr. Hill said, were all against secret sessions. The investigation of the Credit Mobilier, involving the interest of a great comparation, the reputation of members of Contress, and even their title to seats in the House, was held disputed Hayes-Tilden contest had been held partly behind closed doors, but there were peculiar reasons why the sessions of that investigating Committee should have been held in secret.

The Committee and the Senate would subject themselves to just criticism if they kept the doors closed, unless some special and peculiar reason existed therefor. He could find nothing in the matters now to be investigated which would warrant secret sessions. The charge that the Secretary of the Treasury had suggested a proper sugar schedule was not anything so improper that the public should be debarred from hearing testimony, neither did the charge that Senators had bought and sold Sugar stock involve questions of such a character as to warrant secret sessions.

Mr. Gray (Dem., Del.), Chairman of the Committee, replied to Mr. Hill. He desired to say for himself and the other members of that Committee that they had no personal interest whatever in the investigation and no personal wishes to gratify in the manner in which it should be conducted. They were perfectly willing that the Senate should decide for itself the question raised by the Senator from New York with regard to secret sessions.

Valentine could hardly walk with the saw Valentine kicked and clubbed. A policeman, Knox added, knocked his hard off, and when he stooped, kicked him, so that he fell sprawling on his face. As he attempted to rise, Knox asserted, he was clubbed.

"We are preparing now to go down to Police Hendquarters to prefer a complaint against all of the reserves and against Houndsman Rice individually."

Albert R. Lesinsky, of 25 East Seventy-second street, told the same general story as his fellow-sufferers. He said he was chibbed on the back, but not seriously hurt.

All of the students were averse to giving the names of the men injured, who, they said, numbered more than twenty-five.

"Why," said one, "a dozen of my friends were beaten, and I am not personally acquainted with half the men in the class."

It was learned that Wheeler, an athlete of the class, and William Beekman received black eyes at the hands of the police.

The students said that the police even refused to tell where their station-house was located, and that they learned this fact from others. Several, bruised and bleeding, went to the police station and complained to Sergt. Hussey, who refused to entertain complaints unless the students could identify the particular policeman who had attacked them. This they could not do, and were ordered out of the station-house. Other students say the police would not let them enter the station.

The students had torches, but when the police charged them they extinguished the torches. Having to club in the darkness, they say, the police missed many heads that otherwise might have been broken.

Roundsman Rice was not at the East Sixty-seventh street station when an "Evening World" reporter called there. Capt.
